

Grangeville, Idaho
February 25, 1910

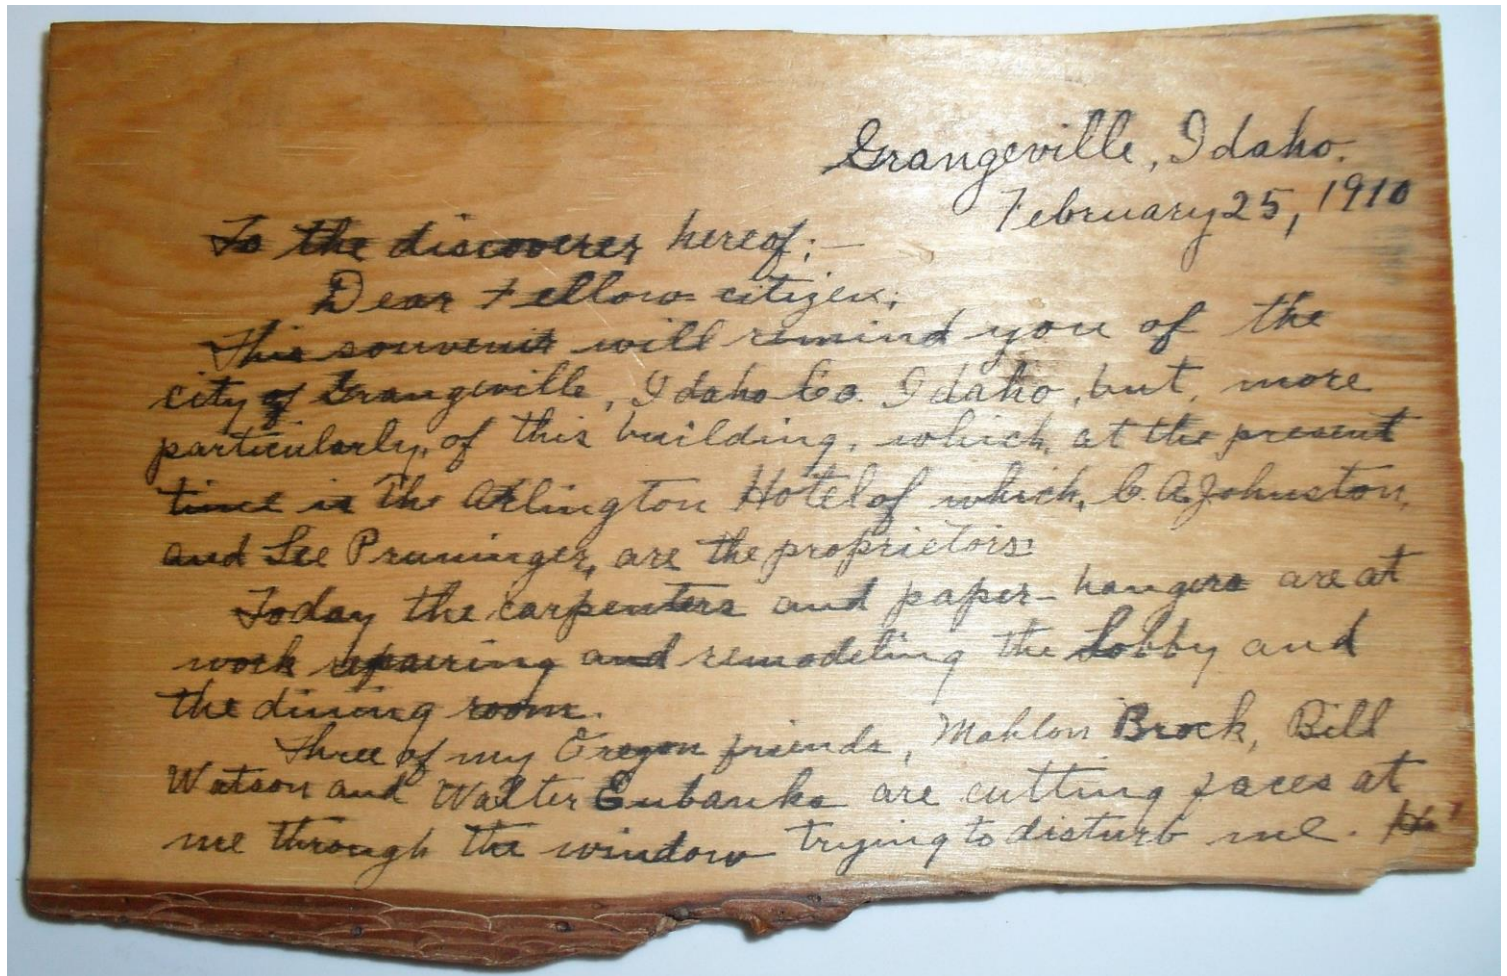

To the discoverers hereof:--

Dear Fellow citizens,

This souvenir will remind you of the city of Grangeville, Idaho Co, Idaho, but more particularly of this building, which at the present time is The Arlington Hotel of which C.A. Johnstone and Lee Prusinger, are the proprietors.

Today the carpenters and paper-hangers are at work repairing and remodeling the Lobby and the dining room.

Three of my Oregon friends, Mahlon Brock, Bill Watson, and Walter Eubanks are cutting faces at me through the windows trying to disturb me. Ha!

Rube Overman, my old professor also came to the window looking wise.

It thundered and lightened to beat hell last night after a 36 hour chinook and heavy rain. Today it is colder again and it snowed too.

Last night Brock and I went up to Gallegher's to see our girls Frankie Fray and Vera Watkins, after we got back from church -Union Revival meeting.

Sure I've got pads on my fingers, corks in my shoes,
Cushions to light upon, as the baseball goes,
Come to old Grangeville next In'pendence day.
Please mister Cottonwood, Kamiah, Nez Perciay,
Oh! shay!

H.M. Lorang original

If the finder of this will notify me, directly or indirectly of his discovery I will give him five dollars in gold upon return to me.

Address me,
Henry M. Lorang, Genesee, Idaho

